

Re-imagining Helston's High Streets

The Guildhall and Market Place to be opened up with more generous public realm and pedestrian priority surfacing on Coinagehall Street. The fire-escape to be removed and the seating, lighting, signage and phone boxes rationalised and relocated within the space to allow an open view to St Michael's Church, and to reclaim Market Place as a small civic space. A widened street-frontage to the Guildhall presents an opportunity to allow accessible level access to the front doors, with the addition of steps to elevate and celebrate the building at the heart of Helston's town centre and the Cultural Quarter.

GUILDHALL AND MARKET PLACE

Making the Guildhall and Cultural Quarter the civic heart of Helston.

The Guildhall and Market Place existing.

Artist's impression of the Guildhall frontage with level threshold access and steps, and a de-cluttered area to Market Place.

Proposed Plan of the Guildhall, Market Place and Museum steps.

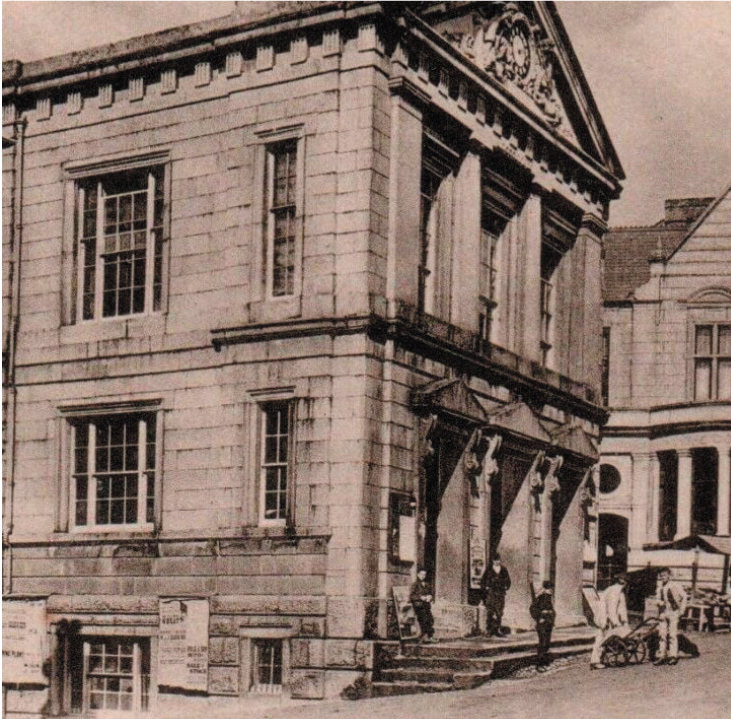

The Guildhall frontage retaining existing steps.

The Guildhall frontage with level threshold access to right-hand door only.

Guildhall frontage c. 1900's (image Kresen Kernow).

Guildhall frontage today

Guildhall frontage with proposed steps and threshold

Museum frontage c. 1900's (image Museum of Cornish Life).

Museum Steps today

Museum frontage, with revised steps and level threshold proposed.

